

THE KEY POINTS OF THE AC MOS METHOD

From the very first consultation, the AC MOS Method seeks to enable the human body to regain lost control of its energetic circuits in order to optimize its Cellular Regeneration capacities and their natural harmonies and reactivate the bodies extraordinary abilities of self-management, self-repair and self-healing. It achieves this by following a rigorous protocol that is supported by continuous scientific measurement. The measurements are undertaken using precise equipment that is the result of considerable research and development. . Many doctors and specialists from around the world have over time assisted with these works.

The AC MOS Method can also assist with the verification of the compatibility of the dosage of medicines taken This provides a valuable aid to medical practitioners, by not only helping them to diagnose their patients condition, but to enable them to both precise and personalise the individuals treatment.

The AC MOS Method works by reading the particular energetic signals of an individual's body, and thus provides a pattern of information, that is unique to that individual These signals and the resulting symptoms may be the similar in different persons, but they are the result of different causes which may often be buried deeply within the individual. This may differ from one individual to another according to where they live or work, their hereditary 'blueprint', what happened during their mother's pregnancy, or as a result of different physical and mental aggressions that have occurred during their life

An illness through the manifestation of its symptoms reflect an energetic imbalance that is deeply rooted within the body. The surface symptoms visible at the surface of the body, ought to be seen as warnings indications of the imbalance of energy within. There must not be complacent about the surface indicators of an illness and try to cure it using superficial or symptomatic treatment. The main objective of the AC MOS Method is the way it involves the use of a deep searches within the body for the cause of illnesses. These include seeking factors which may be of a hereditary origin that might be the source of an individuals sufferings. These external symptoms by their nature only release superficial tensions of the illness, and not the deep seated cause. By achieving an overall energetic global balance through the chain of causes and this results in relief to the individual together a solution to the problem that is both successful and long lasting is established

WHAT IS MEASURED AND HOW IS IT DONE ?

The AC MOS Method relies upon the measurement and analysis of different fields of electro-magnetic energy and circuits within the human body. These measurements give precise information of the cells within the body which constitute the body in three dimensions: physical, emotional and psychological. It enables the identification of different levels within the body, their perturbations corresponding to simple energetic disorders or where they have already formed lesions.

Measuring the electro-magnetic fields

The Method AC MOS is interested the measurement of three energetic fields: the "vibratory " field, the "centripetal" field, and the "centrifugal" field. The measurement of these fields is carried out, using the AC MOS Lecherj Antenna, developed by René Naccachian

* The name of a German physician Ernest LECHER (1856-1926) who discovered the principle known by the name of the "Lecher fils" [Lecher's Wire], during his investigation work into electro-magnetism instruments enables the quality of the vibratory energy of the body to be tested, together with all types of products used and taken by the body and to investigate the effects of aggressions that are of geobiological, ecological or ambient origins

The measurement and the stimulation of the energetic circuits

The second stage has the objective of measuring the energetic potential of each organic circuit and of the body's metabolism. This evaluation enables the identification of possible energetic blockages that require to be removed. This frees the circulation of energy to the body's organs and optimizes the Cellular Regeneration capacity which is receiving their necessary optimum nutritional elements and are consequentially degenerating. This is measured in a very precise manner using the AC MOS 7 Biofeedback Tester.

This also enables the immediate consequence of taking a medication or supplement on an organ to be measured and to see its energetic effect.

The Acmodermil Stimulator enables by vibratory resonance to be achieved by the use of the acupuncture points of the body, but without the need to penetrate the skin or the fear of contamination. It clears the blockage identified by the tester and then regulates the circulation of energy that has been perturbed according to the programme defined necessary by the AC MOS Bioenergetician.

THE AC MOS ENERGETIC BALANCE

The personal and global balance of an individual is measured with great precision. Each individual is unique and when symptoms of an illness appear, they are the result of that individuals hereditary predisposition. That is the result of suffering physical or psychological shocks, that have not been cleared and removed, or properly regulated within the body. It is highly important during an AC MOS energetic balance to precisely consider causal factors attributable to an individuals illness.

Prevention

An energetic balance undertaken periodically according to the needs of the individual, serves as a form of preventative maintenance that reveals energetic imbalances, and thus allowing for the correction of disturbances within the body's energy fields, before they develop into symptomatic illness. By strengthening the body energetically, the body is better able to both face and cope with the diverse aggressions with which it is faced. It can enable the early detection of the presence of a dysfunction that may well be invisible to traditional specialist medicines imaging equipment, thus allowing a much less invasive and traumatising treatment.

PERSONALIZING

The logical range of natural ACMOS products, has been carefully selected and developed. They have been incorporated to form the contents of the ACMOS Valise a veritable box of fuses for the human body. These regulators (essential oils, minerals, trace elements, homeopathic and herbal remedies ...) enable the re-establishment of the body's energetic harmonies. They can respond to particularly profound disharmonies existing within the body at the physical and psychological levels. They are used by being placed precisely at the point on the body where their energetic vibratory quality is required, or where exists an energetic fault.

Chromo-therapy (using coloured filters) is also used to ensure the elimination of toxins and dead cells

POTENTIALISING

The ACMOS Method indicates with precision the compatibility and the dosage of necessarily prescribed medicines. When a medical treatment is being followed, it is essential for the person concerned, to be balanced energetically, in order that the ill organ or disturbed function within the body, does not oppose its medicines and treatment. By re-establishing the lines of energetic harmony, this reinforces the body's natural defence and immune systems and optimises immediately the treatment that is being received. The major benefit of this potentialising lies in the resulting reduction of the dosage and the period of time for taking any prescribed necessary medications.

ANALYSING COMPATIBILITY ...

Compatibility analysis is very important. This enables the vibratory quality of a product to be measured, and to check its compatibility with the person taking it, but who may also be required to take it simultaneously with other products. This compatibility is verified and checked at all the deep levels within the body This permits if the occasion requires, for compensation to be made for the negative effects of a product that needs to be taken as a requirement of an advanced pathological condition est. This compensation is effected by the use of natural regulators from the ACMOS Valise. These are regulators enable the reinforcement of the in order to enable the medication to be precisely dosed. This then offers the opportunity of considering a reduced dosage, and minimise the risk of consequential aggressions and minimise the medications secondary effects.

THE APPLICATION OF THE ACMOS METHOD

The ACMOS protocol rigorously measures the energetic equilibrium upon which the ACMOS Method is based. The method is used by a considerable number of health practitioners and related specialists. It is also used by specialists working with the environments and the habitats of where people both live and work, managing on a regular periodic basis the stresses that affect those environments. However, non of these treatments can be effective and durable, if the human body is suddenly or for prolonged periods suffering exposure without treatment, to systematic aggressions.

The ACMOS Method achieves at the first energetic balance, an identification of the possible type of aggression. These are treated using remedies identified and developed by the ACMOS research centre, which are then precisely placed where the treatment by the remedy is required, similarly for aggressions that are of a geobiological origin (Hartmann lines, underground water,...) or ambient origin such as radiation emitted by computers, or micro-wave ovens, or televisions etc..

GENERAL PRESENTATION

is a centre of scientific research and development for the study of bioenergetics created in 1986 by René NACCACHIAN. It has developed its activities around the world in five specific fields of activity:

- φ researching and developing the ACMOS Method
- φ using the ACMOS Method for energetic balancing consultations
- φ training ACMOS Bioenergeticians
- φ opening and supporting ACMOS centres in France and around the world
- φ supplying and distributing ACMOS equipment and products

THE BASIS AND THE ORIGIN OF THE ACMOS METHOD

The energetic dimension of man is revealed as being fundamental to both finding, and maintaining the overall global balance at different levels within his body, and also his environment. Experience has confirmed that an overall global balance constitutes the factor that determines both good and durable health and that all the different treatments that we receive act strongly with optimum efficiency.

Science and measurement enable interrogation at our body's energetic level to be carried out with considerable precision. It is as a result of the considerable research and validation carried out since 1985 by René NACCACHIAN, engineer, searcher in biophysics, a bioenergetician, Doctor in energetic medicine, sciences and molecular biology. It is an accident that has driven this interest very close to traditional Chinese medicine and acupuncture in particular. It is following very committed effort and research that has lead to the light of high technology that is offered by modern science.

The ACMOS Method and its extremely sophisticated equipment that it uses, are the results proven of fundamental discoveries. Today the progress that has been made in the matter of health by the application of the ACMOS Method is measurable and , from the opinions and experiences of numerous specialists around the world this is both considerable and incontestable.

In the case of an anomaly, or facing a tension or an aggression, the body searches to re-establish its global balance, by managing the circulation of energy in its circuits. It does this by controlling the energy flow, by blocking it, by switching it off, or by slowing it down, or by accelerating the energetic currents blockage. These actions of defence by the body work at the level of the acupuncture points, where the comparison can be made to the way an electric circuit is able to fuse itself or operate an electrical cut out when it becomes over stressed, or has a fault of some description develop. Thus when there is an aggression in a zone of resistance in the body, the acupuncture points respond with these points acting as veritable fuses in an electrical circuit. At each level of, function or organ or region, the body alerts itself through its energetic circuitry, these alerts if not promptly responded to and treated cause pathological and eventually leisonal

It is of great importance not to interfere with the 'fuses' that the body has activated and deactivated intentionally in order to maintain the balance and the symmetry of the energetic fields. On the other hand there is the need to re-establish the function of the fusible that the body cannot manage any longer by itself. This is the object of the ACMOS Method with its aim to re-establish the global energetic balance.

THE ACMOS TRAINING PROGRAMME

There are three levels of training offered to students and are in the form of practical and theoretical training .

The basis of the training programme, is to become an ACMOS Bioenergetician, this comprises four successive levels and takes in the region of one year. Successful completion results in the certifying and the award of the student with Certification as an ACMOS Bioenergetician. Each of the four levels of the course takes two days (a week end) of theory followed by a day of practical experience.

This first level of training is completed with a view to obtaining an ACMOS Bioenergetician Diploma.

The third and final level is to follow a complementary training in naturopathy that will take a total of two to three years. Following the satisfactory completion of this training the student receives an NBA Diploma (Naturopath Bioenergetician ACMOS).

In addition there are theme seminars on specialised subjects or practical sessions, where it is possible to where it is possible to practice and perfect the ACMOS Method.
